TAPE MATERIALS EXPLAINED
 "TENSILIZED" E.S.P. Behind the Iron Curtain

"Tensilized" is simply a process of pre-stretching tape to eliminate the potential problem of stretching on fast starts and stops. Naturally, this procedure adds somewhat to the cost of the tape. All tape base types (below) can be tensilized with the exception of acetate.

"POLYESTER AND MYLAR"

Polyester and mylar are essentially similar in composition. *Mylar is the Dupont registered trade name. Polyester is considered the finest base material for recording tape because of its extra strength and dimensionally stable characteristics. The extra strength of polyester based tapes allows its use in 0.5 mil (triple play) tapes. It is usually more expensive than acetate or PVC based tapes. The base material of a tape does not necessarily have any effect upon the quality of the surface coating or frequency response.

"POLYVINYL CHLORIDE" (PVC) AND ACETATE SIDE 2: 0-1523

Acetate and Polyvinyl Chloride (PVC) are dissimilar, but less costly tape base materials. Acetate and PVC are usually found in 1.5 and 1.0 mil tapes. Both materials are satisfactory for most recording purposes.

MIL THICKNESS Dr. Wm McHenry on "Dreams"

The thickness of a tape cross section in the most commonly used tapes is 1.5, 1.0, or 0.5 expressed in mils (1.0 mil is .001" thick). The thicker the tape, the stronger it is, however, polyester ("Mylar") is actually many times stronger than acetate; its strength being required for 1.0 and especially the very fragile 0.5 mil thick tapes. Thickness has no relation to tape quality per se, except that the thinnest tapes are more susceptible to "print through".
